What to expect

Once your complaint has been received, we will be in contact with you within 3 working days. We will then assess whether we can deal with your complaint. The Victims' Commissioner can only deal with a complaint if it has been made by, or on behalf of a victim of crime, and:

- it is in relation to a violent offence, including all forms of domestic and family violence
- it relates to rights under the Charter of Victims' Rights
- the agency that you have made a complaint about is a government or government-funded agency.

You can find out more about how we deal with complaints at www.victimskommissioner.qld.gov.au.

Privacy statement

The Office of the Victims' Commissioner ('we'/us') collect your personal information and the personal information of others from you, to understand people's experiences as victims of crime. We will use this information to:

- promote the rights of victims of crime and the services available to victims of crime
- conduct research into matters affecting victims
- consult in relation to matters relating to victims
- provide advice to the Minister on issues affecting victims and the promotion of victims' rights
- identify and review systemic issues affecting victims of crime.

We will not use the personal information for any other purpose unless we are required or authorised under a law to use it for another purpose or we have your consent.

We will collect your contact information, your name (if you choose to give it to us), information about yours or another person's experience, and your opinions on your experiences, or the experiences of others as victims of crime.

If you are making a Charter of Victims' Rights complaint, section 47 of the Victims' Commissioner and Sexual Violence Review Board Act 2024 (VCSVRB Act) requires you to provide us with your name and contact details and enough information to indicate what your complaint is about. We give your personal information to others to connect you with support services or refer your concerns to law enforcement or regulatory bodies in Queensland or Australia. If you are making a Charter of Victims' Rights complaint, we may also disclose any concerns you raise about a person, government entity or non-government entity, including your personal information, to a government entity or non-government entity or that person under sections 49 and 51 of the VCSVRB Act. We may refer your complaint, including your personal information, to a government entity or non-government entity under section 57 of the VCSVRB Act.

However, we will not give your personal information to anyone else unless we are required or authorised to do so. We manage your personal information in accordance with the Information Privacy Act 2009.

If you are giving us a contact email address to write back to you, personal information contained in your response may be transferred outside of Australia. To avoid this, you can tell us about your concerns by post at GPO Box 149 BRISBANE QLD 4001 or by phone 1800 714 100 or give us an email address where the servers are located in Australia.
